Whelefish Is, Western Coast of Greenland, Lat. 68 59 N., lon. 53 13 W.

We arrived here this morning at 9 o'clock, after a passage of thirtytwo days from New York, which was rather long, owing to unfavorable winds we had.

On our arrival here we found an English bark at anchor; she is a store ship, having brought stores and coal out for the squadron, which, by the way, sailed from here yesterday, consisting of two barks of about 300 tons each, carrying sixty men, and steamers of about 100 tons each with from forty to fifty men; they are all bound in search of Sir John Franklin. The bark sails in about a week for England, which will give us all a fine opportunity to write, the only one I am afraid we shall have for some time to come.

After leaving New York we kept company with the Rescue, by keep. Portland on the 26th. ing under short sail, until the 19th ult., when, finding it impossible for her to keep up, we made sail and at midnight (or rather what ought night for sleeping, or rather a portion of it.
